FIRST THINGS THAT COME TO MO'S MIND

ON RED SOX TEAMMATES: "No prima donnas can play here. You can't pass the blame. You have to be razor sharp, mentally fierce and tougher than anybody else."

ON RED SOX FANS: "They know the strike zone. They know what should be happening in certain situations, so when you go to the plate you can't be swinging at pitches in the dirt. You might be able to get away with that on the road but if you try it at home you can bet you'll get booed."

ON SIGNING AUTOGRAPHS: "It's all in how people ask. I'll sign anytime they want me to. But if they come up and say 'you've got to sign,' I'm not going to sign."

ON HIS STRENGTH: "Feel that arm. I'm about twice as strong as I was last year. Those balls that were falling short or were hitting the top of the wall and not going out—they're going out this year."

ON THE BEST ADVICE FROM HIS PARENTS: "Be proud of your last name and where you came from. Walk tall. And when things get their roughest and people count you out, you've got to come back and prove them wrong."

BUTCH HOBSON

Butch Hobson

Hobson begins his third year as manager after keeping last year's team in the thick of the American League East race for much of the season. The former Red Sox third baseman slugged 30 home runs with 112 RBI for the Sox in 1977 and spent six of his eight big league seasons with Boston. After guiding his Triple A PawSox from last place in 1990 to first place in 1991, Butch was selected as Baseball America's minor league Manager of the Year.

MIKE EASLER
45
 HITTING
 COACH

Easler, in his first season as hitting coach, saw the team bat .264—up from .246 the previous year. Mike played for six teams in 14 big league seasons, including two with the Sox, before his 1992 major league coaching debut with the Brewers.

JOHN WATHAN
12
 BULLPEN
 COACH

Wathan comes to Boston after serving two years with the Angels as third base coach, interim manager and bench coach. John played his entire nine year major league career with the Royals and is the third winningest manager in Kansas City history.

MIKE ROARKE
33
 PITCHING
 COACH

Roarke spent the last two years as the San Diego Padres pitching coach, where his 1992 staff broke the club's all-time strikeout record. Mike caught for the Tigers for four seasons and has 41 years of baseball experience, 19 as a major league coach.

FRANK WHITE
 FIRST BASE
 COACH

White rejoins the Sox organization after having managed the 1992 Gulf Coast Rookie League Red Sox. Frank won eight Gold Gloves and appeared in six All-Star Games. His 2,324 games for Kansas City are the second most in Royals history.

GARY ALLENSON
32
 THIRD BASE
 COACH

Allenson played catcher for Boston from 1979-1984. He spent five years managing and coaching farm teams for the Yankees and Red Sox before returning to Boston as bullpen coach in 1992. This is Gary's first year as third base coach.

Tropicana®

Every taste is a natural wonder. <sup>TM</sup>

The Red Sox have had more players with individual career records than any other team.

No wonder they've chosen a leader to be their bank.

Since the days when they were known as the Pilgrims, the Boston Red Sox have been associated with leaders. That's why today, the bank of the Red Sox is Shawmut Bank. At Shawmut, we've become a leader by making it a point to understand our customers' needs. Because only then can we offer the right products and services to help them reach their financial goals. It's why the Red Sox, the Celtics, the Bruins, the Patriots and the Whalers all rely on our strength and resources. And it is just one of the reasons why New England banks with Shawmut.

ROGER CLEMENS

Clemens posted 29 starts to overtake Cy Young as the Sox' all-time club leader (301) in that category. Roger also notched his 2,000th career strikeout (Danny Tartabull, August 11) and topped the staff with 160K, but injuries limited him to fewer than 200 innings for the first time since 1985.

ANDRE DAWSON

Dawson belted 13 home runs to vault him past Duke Snyder into 24th place (412) on the Major League all-time list. Andre hit 311 with 11 homers in his final 75 games and led the team with 16 game-winning and 27 game-tying or go-ahead RBI.

VAUGHN

Vaughn hit .297 with a club high 29 round-trippers and 101 RBI while both his slugging percentage (.509) and on-base percentage (.390) made the league top-10 lists. Mo was awarded the Thomas A. Yawkey Award as the Red Sox MVP by the Boston Baseball Writers Association in his first full season.

MIKE GREENWELL

Greenwell bounced back from an injury-shortened 1992 to hit .315 with only 46 strikeouts in 540 at bats. Mike hit a team-high .328 after the All-Star Game and was named the Sox Comeback Player of the Year by the Boston Baseball Writers Association.

A MAN FOR ALL SEASONS.

BECAUSE THE BEER YOU LOVE IN THE WINTER may not be what you enjoy in the summer, Samuel Adams has a different offering for spring, summer, winter and fall.

Rich and malty Double Bock is warming in early spring. Delicate Samuel Adams Wheat refreshes in summer. Cooler weather brings Oktoberfest, a stronger, more robust brew. And earthy, herbal Winter Lager is a perfect antidote to cold, dark nights. A special offering for the holiday season only, Cranberry Lambic is made with cranberries and a touch of maple syrup.

And whatever the season, savor our year-round brews: Samuel Adams Boston Lager, Boston Ale, Boston Lightship, and our most recent introduction, Samuel Adams Cream Stout, a rich and delicious interpretation of a traditional style.

THE 850 TURBO SPORTSWAGON FROM VOLVO. Imagine sprinting from the dry cleaners to the post office behind the wheel of a wagon with a 222-horsepower turbocharged engine—the most powerful engine we’ve ever produced.

And think about taking every corner between the hardware store and the grocery store, feeling the road as never before, thanks to a specially-tuned sports suspension, a set of optional 16 inch high-performance radials and optional traction control system.

SATURDAY MORNING ERRANDS WILL NEVER BE THE SAME.

True, the chores that you have to do in these places may not make your heart beat any faster. But we feel certain that along the roads and highways in between, you'll feel something that's been missing from most Saturday mornings: The sheer pleasure of driving.

The 850 Turbo Sportswagon from Volvo. Think of it as a sports car with the world's biggest trunk.

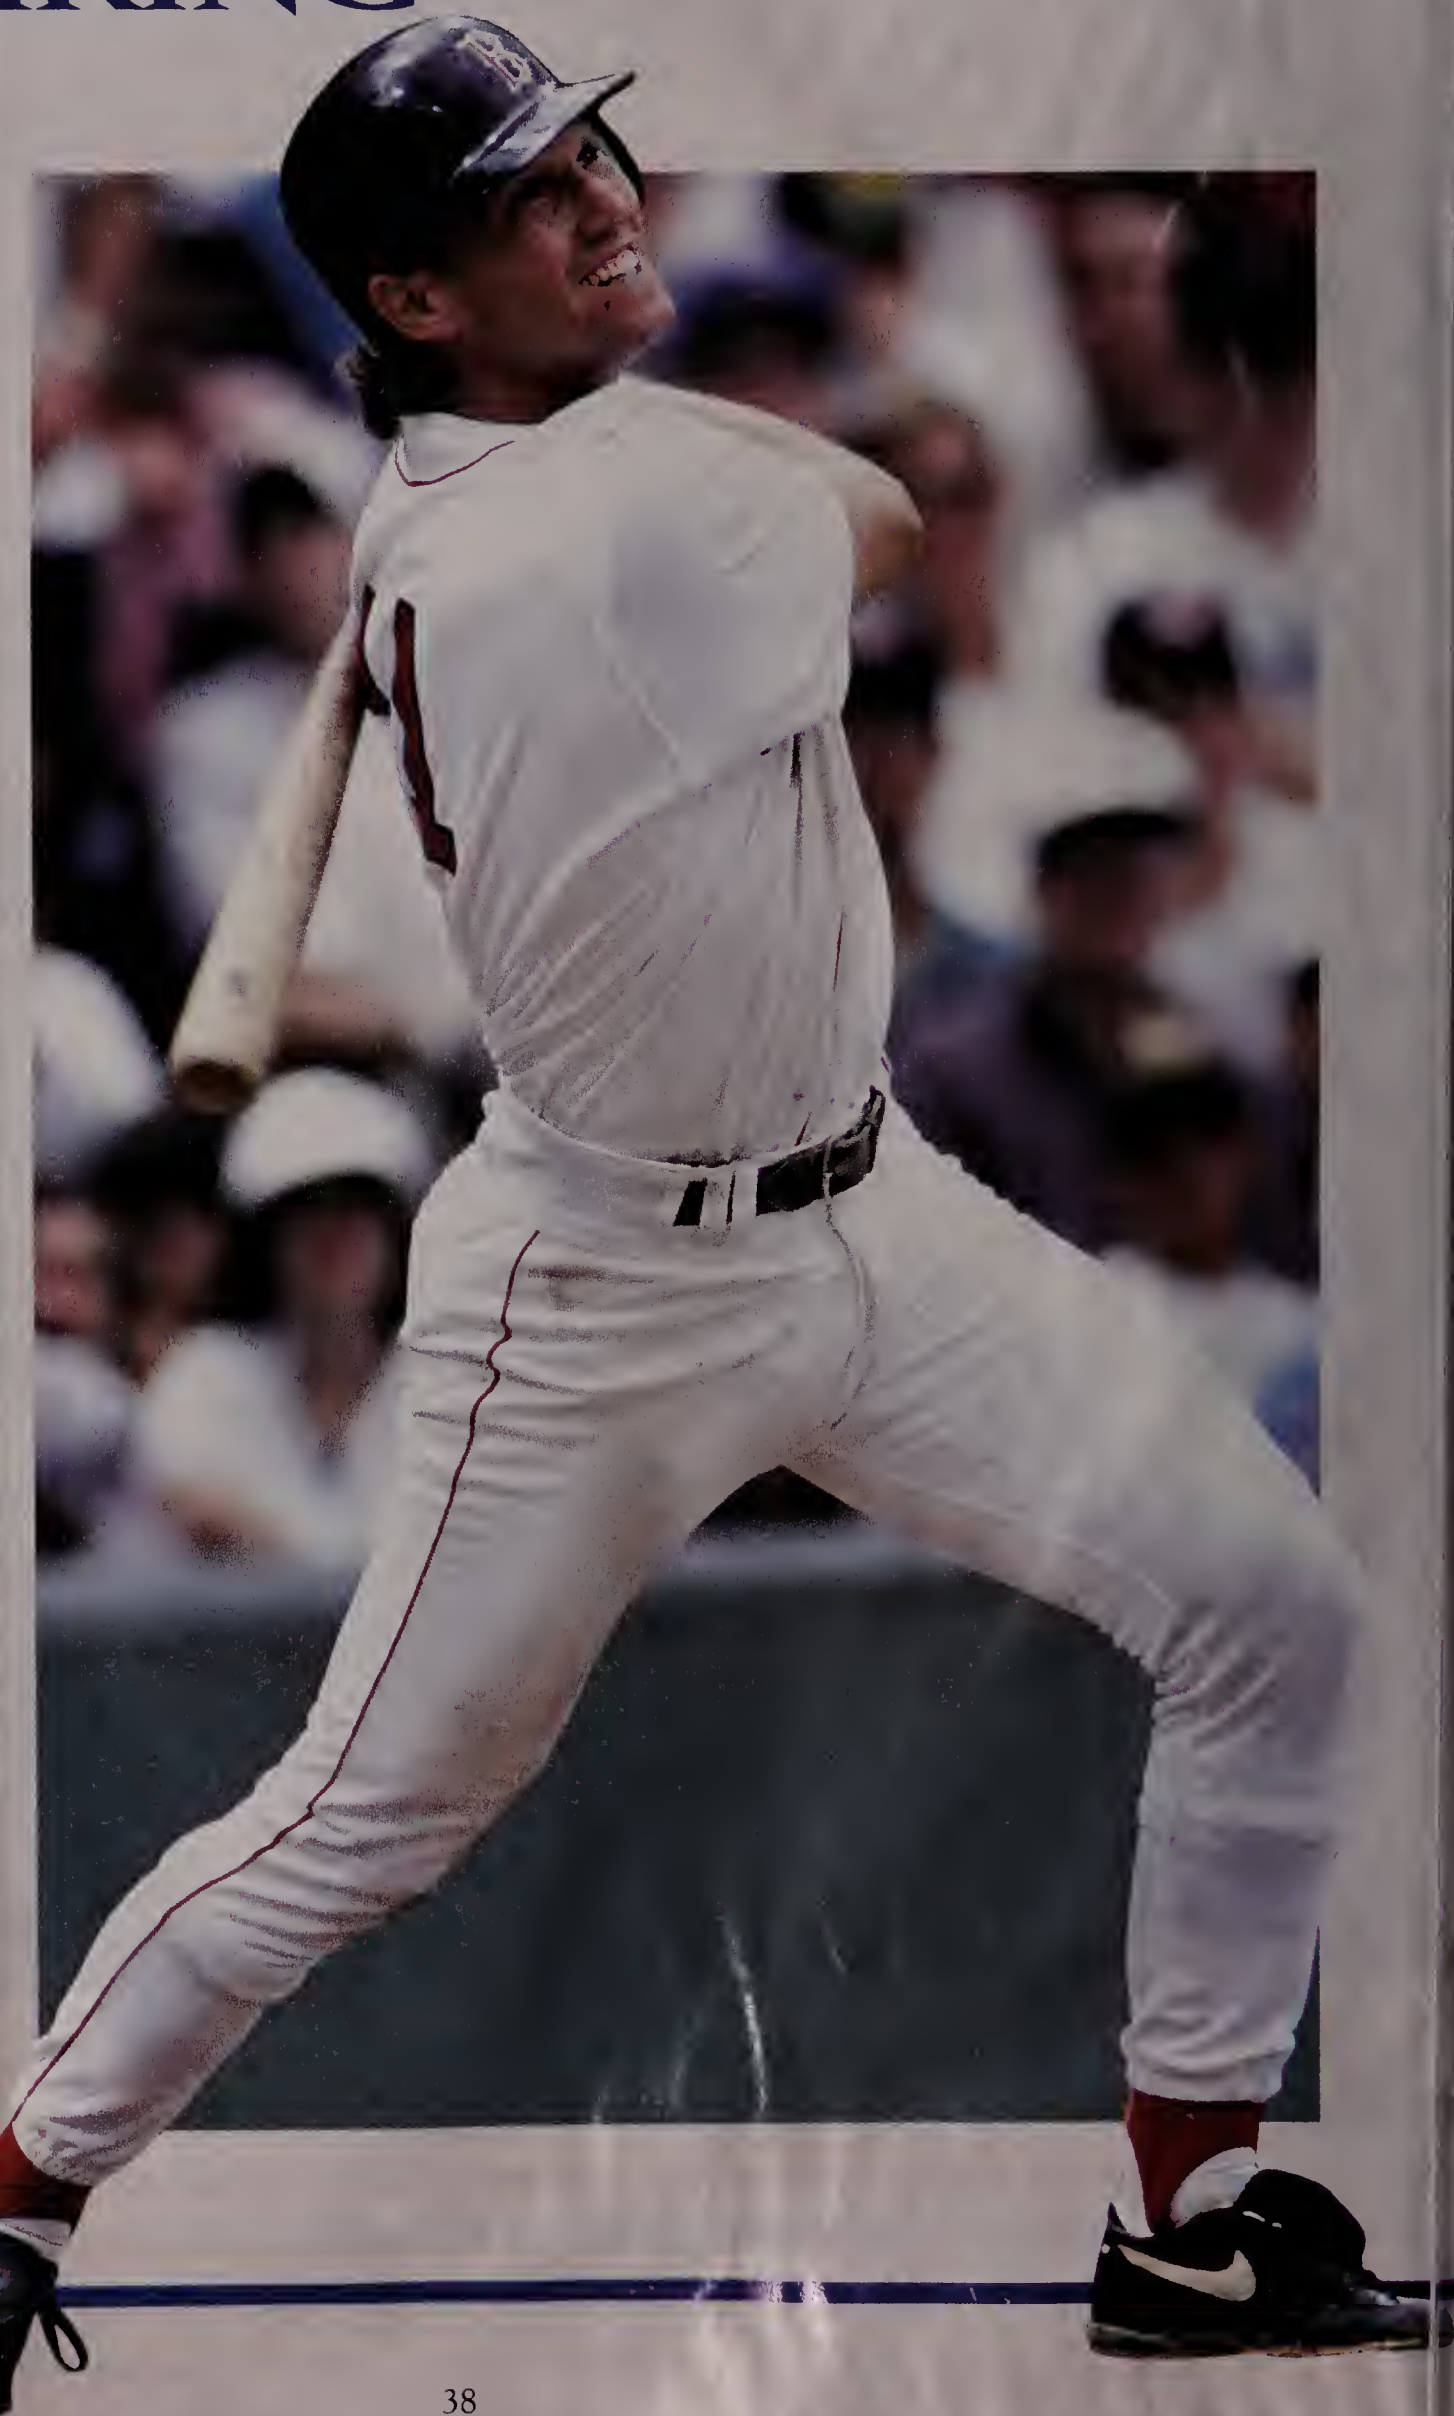

Drive safely.

PAUL QUANTRILL

Quantrill made 49 appearances in his first full season with the Sox. Paul prevented 31 of 36 inherited runners from scoring, the relief staff's best mark, and also tossed a complete game, two-hit, 6-0 shutout on July 4 in Seattle.

CARLOS QUINTANA

Quintana hit .302 in 44 games through May 24 after returning from an automobile accident that caused him to miss the entire 1992 season. Carlos staged 18 multi-hit performances and made only three errors in 344 chances at first and no errors in 51 games in the outfield.

The 225-hp 9000 Aero has a top speed of 140 mph. But in the Aero, performance comes from more than speed alone.

Its credentials include the most powerful turbocharged engine Saab has ever built, a chassis stiffened 25% for better roadholding, a finely tuned sports suspension with specially calibrated MacPherson struts, and four rally-style leather seats designed to keep you and your passengers firmly positioned during aggressive cornering.

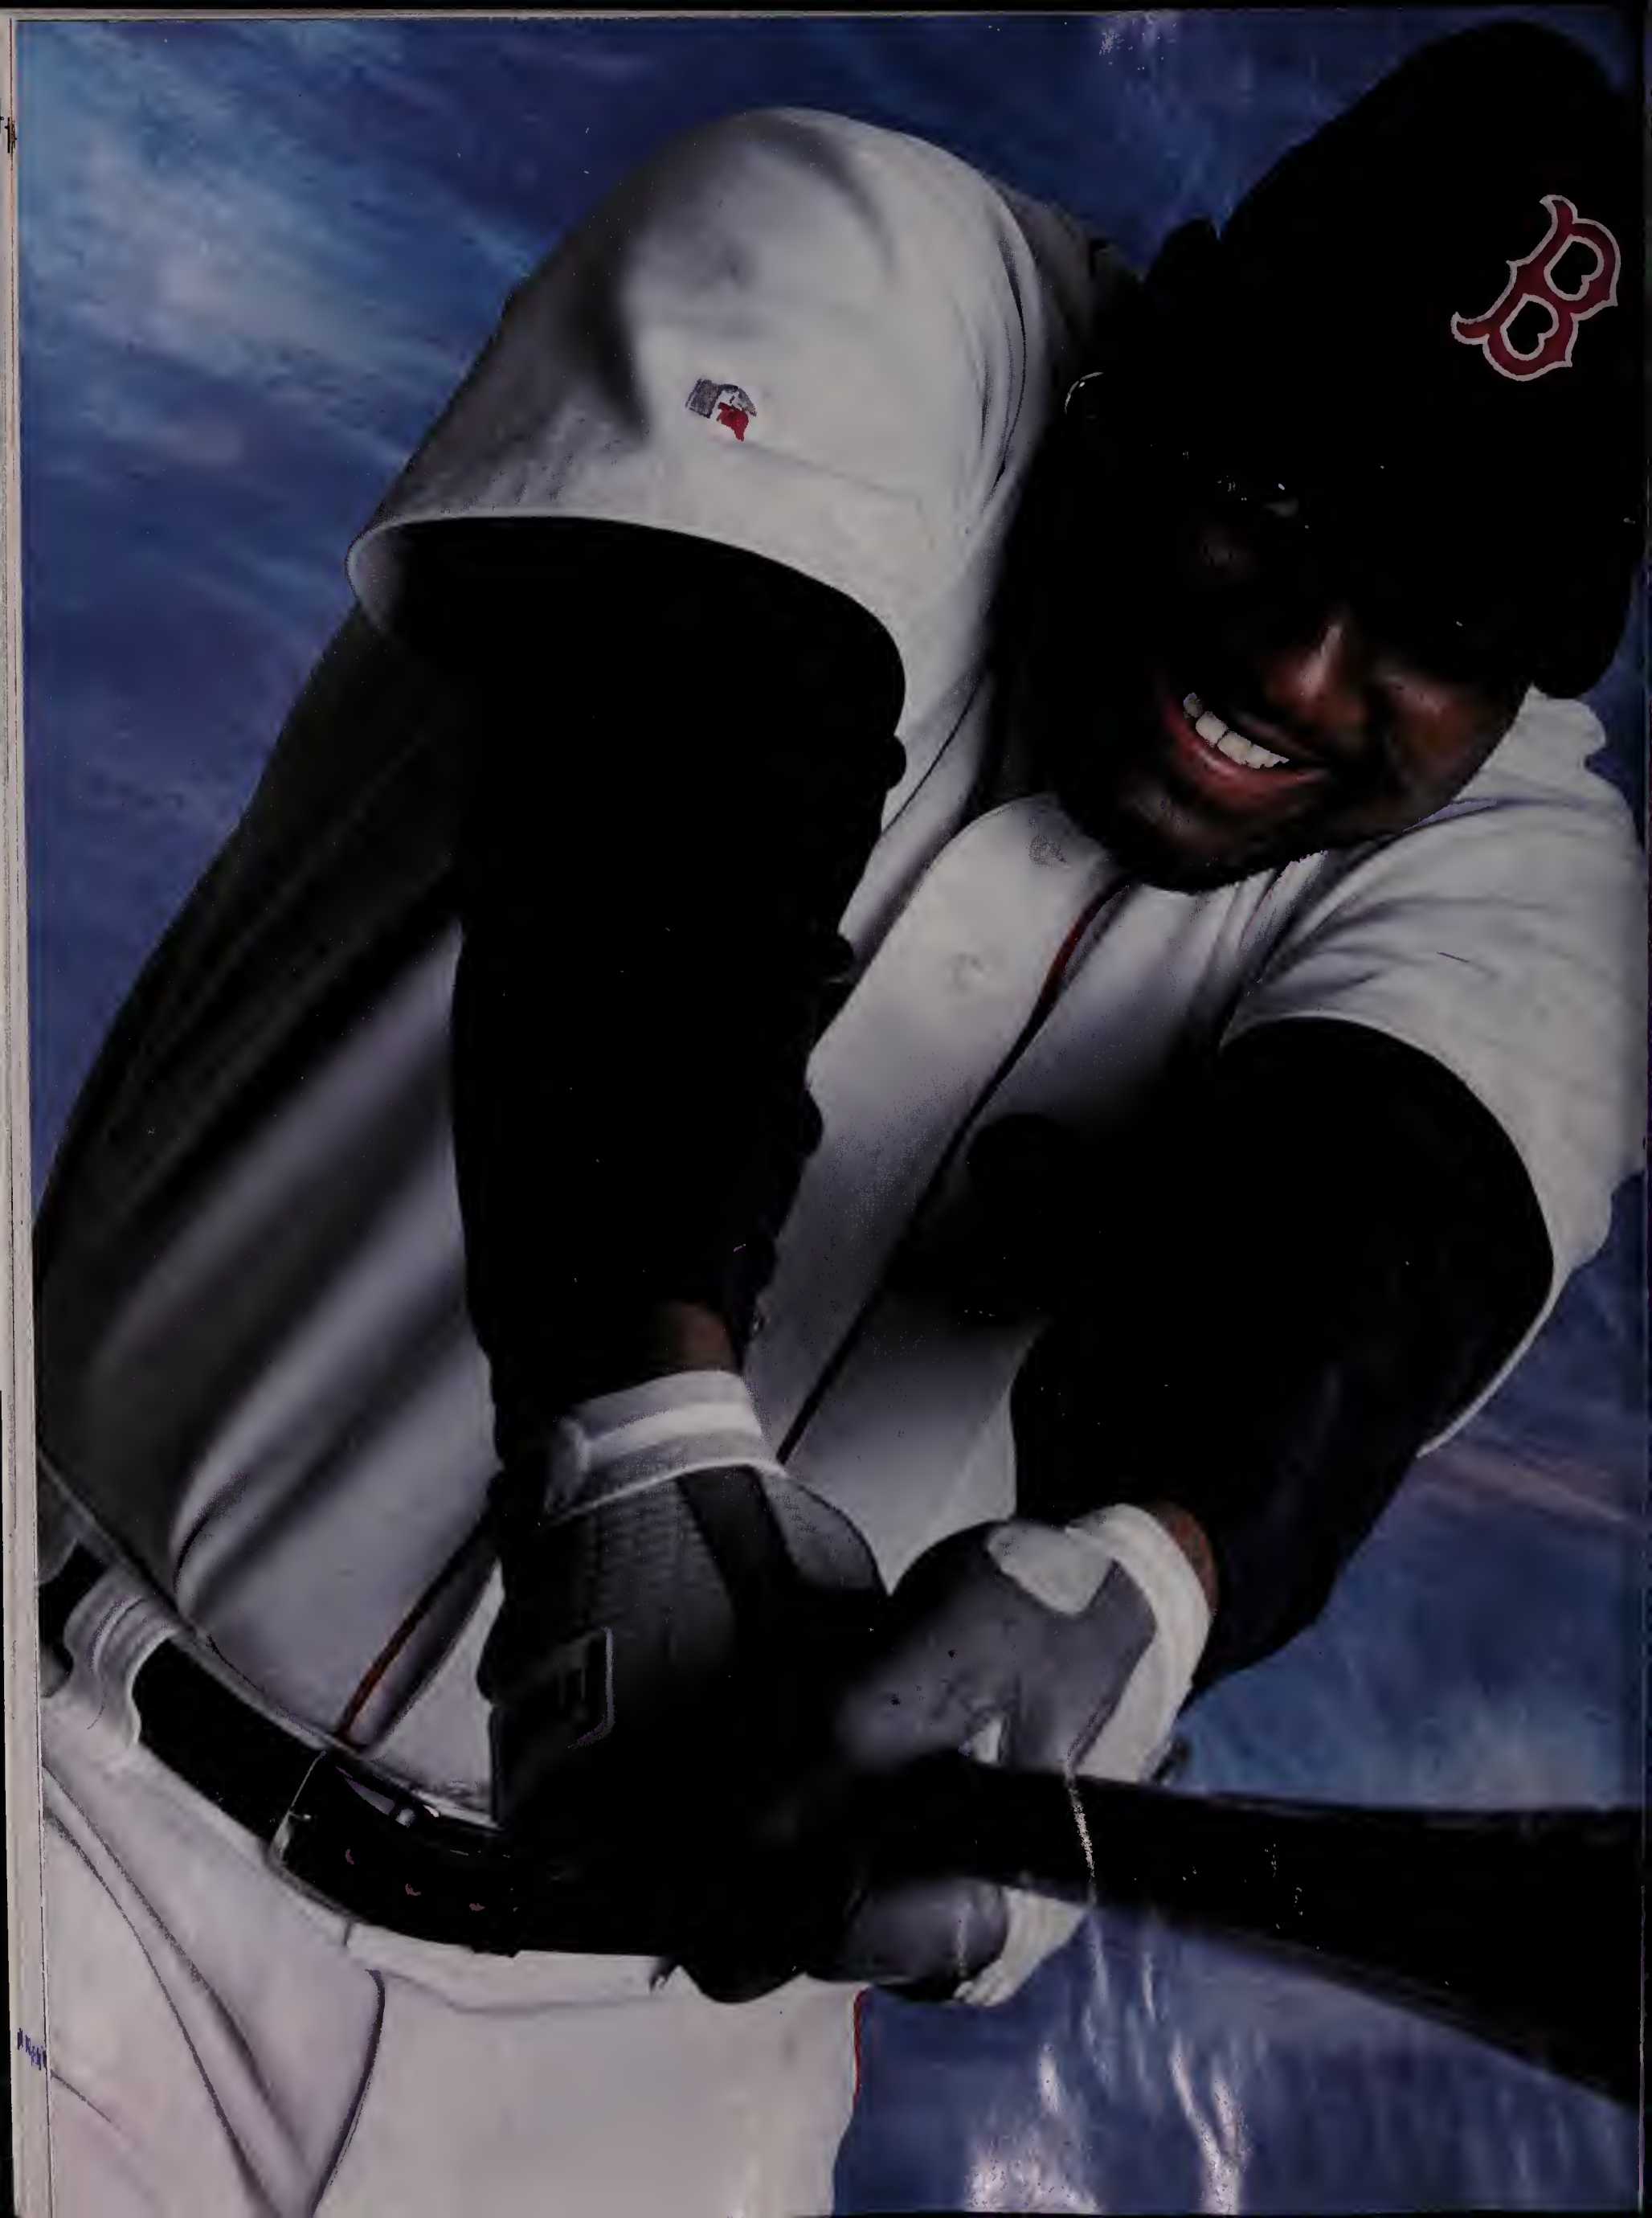

The result is the sort of power and handling seldom encountered except in an all-out race car. And the comfort and safety seldom encountered except in a Saab.

To test-drive the new 9000 Aero, visit your Boston-area Saab dealer. Or call 1-800-582-SAAB. Either way, you'll be traveling in fast company.

“Have you ever seen the Tasmanian Devil spin?
That’s who I am. Spinning and running, just like the cartoon, tearing through everything in my way. It’s like there’s just something burning on the inside.”*

What smolders in the gut of Mo Vaughn is, by his own admission, anger—split in equal parts rage and resolve. Rage against those who labeled him ‘the franchise’, only to too quickly abandon him. And resolve to never, ever forget. Now, following a sensational 1993 season, the Red Sox first baseman reveals the two keys to his success—mastering his anger and maintaining his lifelong priorities.

BY KENAN WOODS

First Things First

“My parents taught me the importance of always giving to others. They are very principled people who continually remind me that in order to get respect, I first have to give it.”

Mo Vaughn never expected failure. Rather he had carefully prepared himself for success in two pursuits. First a commitment to community service; and second, a career in the Major Leagues.

The first part was the easier task. Growing up the son of teachers in Norwalk, Connecticut, young Maurice Samuel Vaughn was taught selflessness through word and deed. He would accompany his parents to deliver Christmas gifts at homeless shelters. He would tag along as his father volunteered his time to coach inner city kids at a local boys club. He would sit in when his mother conducted special tutoring sessions for disadvantaged students in the Vaughn's home.

Mo also drew inspiration from his favorite movie, The Jackie Robinson Story. The lessons learned in youth from this real life American baseball hero—especially Robinson's perseverance and statesmanship in breaking baseball's color barrier—remain vivid today.

“Jackie's strength and courage enabled me to do what I'm doing. I wear his uniform number 42 out of respect for all that he stands for.”

Hard work, academic achievement and a special aptitude for baseball earned Mo a scholarship to Seton Hall University where he became a living sports legend. Vaughn broke the school's career home run record—in his freshman season. He was named the Big East Conference Player of the Decade at the end of his junior year.

Eyeing his collegiate dossier, which included a .417 average and 57 home runs, the Boston Red Sox wisely made Vaughn a 1989 first-round draft pick. Almost immediately he became the farm system's leading prospect. In 1989—in just half a season—he slugged eight home runs at Double A New Britain, one of the minor leagues' most notorious pitchers' parks.

From an early age Mo was taught to set his sights high and follow through.

A promotion to Pawtucket in 1990 made the Sox decision to make Mo a first rounder seem brilliant as he yielded a monster output: a .295 average with 22 homers and 72 RBI, despite missing 38 games due to an early season broken hand. Mo, at age 22, was seemingly on his way.

What could possibly go wrong in this script?

“I hope all of the people saying nice things about me now will hang in there with me when things get tough.”

The occasion was the post-season Boston Baseball Writers dinner, where Mo was honored as co-winner of the Red Sox' 1990 Minor League Player of the Year award. He charmed the crowd with his wit and humility. Little did he realize that in less than 18 months time his spontaneous, lighthearted request would prove ironically futile.

But for now, the good times were rolling. By the time Vaughn rocked 14 longballs with 50 RBI in his first 69 games with Pawtucket in 1991, it was apparent he had nothing left to prove in the minor leagues. He was called up to Boston on June 27 and sent high “phenom” expectations skyrocketing further three nights later in Baltimore. There, his first home run travelled 438 feet, coming to rest 5 rows short of being only the second ball ever to depart Memorial Stadium. The next night in Milwaukee a 435-foot homer punctuated a 4 RBI performance.

That was when it really began...the hype, the pressure, the unrealistic expectations. Though perhaps not quite a local baseball god, deification rites had certainly commenced.

Vaughn's early success soon turned into a reality check, as he finished the season hitting a modest .260 with only four home runs in 74 games. A humble start, but better than those of dozens of other “can't miss” superstars. ‘Wait ‘til next year’ was the patient refrain of fans and media; that will be Mo's big breakthrough.

And briefly in 1992, he indeed kindled these fires of fulfillment. The man his college fraternity brothers tagged “The Hit Dog” reported to spring training 30 pounds lighter and, he says, “with a better attitude.” With his primary competition for the first base job, Carlos Quintana,

WHO'S ON FIRST?

Mo's on first now—but here are nine other Sox first basemen who were household names in their eras due to stellar performances. (Years indicate seasons spent with the Red Sox.)

Jake Stahl

GARLAND “JAKE” STAHL (1903, 1908-10, 1912-13) led the league with ten home runs in 1910, becoming only the second player in club history to reach double figures. Appointed player/manager in 1912 after spending the previous year working in a bank, Jake hit .301 and drove in 60 runs as he piloted the Sox to the club's second World Series championship.

Stuffy McInnis

JOHN “STUFFY” MCINNIS (1918-21) made but one error in 1,652 opportunities in 1921 for a big league leading .999 fielding percentage. No slouch at the plate, McInnis batted over .300 in 12 of his 19 seasons and drove in or scored 90 runs four times. In his career, Stuffy played for five world champion teams, including the 1918 Red Sox.

Jimmy Foxx

JIMMIE FOXX (1936-42) delivered one of baseball's greatest years in 1938 en route to winning his third MVP award. "Double X" blasted 50 home runs, drove in 175 runs and led the league with a .349 average and a staggering .704 slugging average. In his twenty year career, Jimmie batted .325 with 534 homers and 1,921 RBI. He also exhibited a fearsome throwing arm and posted a 1.52 ERA in ten pitching appearances.

Billy Goodman

BILLY GOODMAN (1947-57) is best remembered as the first utility player in baseball history to win a batting title when he hit .354 in 1950 playing five positions. Billy played a total of seven different positions in nine years with the Sox including 392 games at first, where in 1949 he led the league in fielding percentage. He hit .290 or better for 11 straight years (1948-1958) including five .300 seasons.

Pete Runnels

PETE RUNNELS (1958-62) was edged out of the 1958 American League batting title (.322 to .328) by Ted Williams in the final game but returned to capture that crown in 1960 (.320) and again in 1962 (.326). Runnels led the league in fielding percentage at second base in 1960 and at first the following season. The left-handed singles hitter topped the .300 mark in each of his five Sox seasons.

out for the season, Vaughn seized Opening Day.

In his first at-bat, he took a pitch deep into Yankee Stadium's right-field seats. He homered again in his next game. After his first 25 plate appearances, Mo had found himself on base 13 times. Things were going successfully in his baseball career, just as he'd always planned.

"It was the hardest thing I've ever been through. I had never failed. I had excelled at every level of sports. And there I was failing within reach of what I had worked so hard for."

For the first time in Mo Vaughn's athletic life, adversity struck—and struck hard. After that quick start in 1992 he failed to get a hit for more than a week. His defense steadily deteriorated. Off the field, some who had called for his Cooperstown enshrinement at the Baseball Writers Dinner, now began to call for his scalp.

What had gone wrong?

Ted Williams once claimed that all there was to hitting was getting good pitches, but Vaughn had found few of those available after word spread that he couldn't handle anything but an ill-located fastball.

"The pitchers were adjusting to me, but I wasn't adjusting to them," he remembers. "Nothing felt right."

He was missing pitches he used to cream, miffing plays he'd made a thousand time before. He worried that his next lapse might send him to the bench—or, worse, back to the minor leagues. And sure enough, after failing to hold on to a pair of throws in a game at Kansas City, a May 11 bus ticket to Pawtucket awaited the first baseman. In his luggage he packed a .185 batting average and two home runs—the ones he hit to open his "breakthrough" season.

"He has the speed of a tree sloth, the attitude of a brat, and the heart of the Tin Man in the Wizard of Oz," wrote one unforgiving scribe.

The rage began. "I will never forget what was said as long as I live. I'll never forget my mother telling me that the things these reporters were writing about me and what they were saying about me on the radio were making her cry."

Vaughn took out some of his wrath with a

After Mo had a couple of false starts in 1991-92, high-fivin' became a common scene at Fenway last season.

First Things First

.282, six homer, 28 RBI performance during a 39-game PawSox exile. The numbers earned him a June 22 recall. Mo returned energized, hitting .346 in his first seven games back. Then he suffered yet another relapse, batting only .235 after June 30.

By season's end it was obvious adjustments still needed to be made. Mo's anger—still boiling away—was manifesting itself in the destructive forces of confusion and frustration. The 1993 season would prove to be a turning point—not just in Mo Vaughn's career, but also in his life.

"The only thing you can control is how hard you go – both in life and baseball. You can't be perfect. You're bound to make mistakes and errors, but people will ultimately respect you for how hard you play. The test of a man is not when things are going well. It's when things are going poorly that you get a glimpse of his real character."

That is the 1994 version of Vaughn speaking, but during the bitter winter of '92-93, the inner voices were not quite so sage. In fact, they frequently whispered words of diabolical counsel:

"When I get into the batter's box, I'm evil, man. I will hurt you."

"Give up baseball...It's not worth it...Quit!"

"After the last game of the season, I thought about just taking my uniform off, throwing it on the field, and walking away. That's how angry I was."

He remembered all that was written. He remembered his mother in tears. He remembered a favorite aunt who lived in Roxbury, Loretta Peters, who had counseled him through the tough times only to die just as he reached his lowest point. As he reflected on 1992 and thought about 1993, the challenging words of Mo's mother, again, made a difference.

"I'm sick and tired of hearing this and hearing that about you," she admonished. "I just want you to prove them wrong. I've been watching you play all your life. I know how you are supposed to play, and I don't want to hear any excuses. All I want you to do is go hit and catch and do what you're supposed to."

Thankfully, Mo had been taught from an early age to be an obedient child.

"I had something to prove," he concluded. "Not to myself, but to all those people who said I couldn't play."

An "adoption" of the Charles Taylor Elementary School was as big a lift for Mo as for the kids.

“Be patient, hold off on the trigger for a split-second longer. Let the ball tell you where it wants to be hit. Then unload.

Mo Vaughn's assessment of Mike Easler's role is solemn and succinct: "He saved my career."

The Red Sox hitting coach was a new hire for the 1993 season. He not only would become Vaughn's hitting guru, but his personal confidante as well, helping to channel all that anger into base hits and home runs, instead of implusive pressure.

During spring training of 1993, Easler began to rework the lefty's approach at the plate. Job one was to get him to stop trying to play pepper with Fenway's Jimmy Fund billboard beyond the right field bleachers. With a relatively short swing—uncommon in home-run hitters—Vaughn possessed the ability, reasoned Easler, to use the whole field and hit for both average and power.

"Mike taught me to try to hit the ball in between the light towers on the Green Monster," acknowledges the grateful student. "They're my goalposts."

But refitting the swing mechanics was only half the battle. Perhaps more importantly, Easler realized Vaughn required a radically altered mental approach to fully unleash the potential of his bat. Mo's inner fury had to be harnessed and transmitted to the bat barrel. Easler knew one thing for certain: Vaughn had to play angry.

Mo responded to Easler's advice immediately. "I put all that anger that had built up into by game and it made me play better. It's my edge. When I get into the batter's box, I'm evil, man. I don't feel any pain, and I will hurt you."

The effects of his new mental approach—bottling and releasing all that inner ire at the plate—often left Mo so lightheaded, that after some home runs, he couldn't remember running the bases.

But there were many home runs. That confused, frustrated kid of 1992 was gone forever. Mo Vaughn, vintage '93, was one angry, focused, hitting machine. By the end of April, Vaughn's batting average stood at .412 and his slugging percentage at an unfathomable .735.

Dick Stuart

DICK STUART (1963-64) hit 42 HRs in 1963 and led the league in his two specialties, RBI (118) and errors (29). Often cited as an erratic fielder, "Dr. Strangeglove" actually registered the third most assists in Boston history (134 in 1963) and is also the only first basemen in history to make three assists in one inning. Stuart hit 66 home runs as a minor leaguer in Lincoln in 1956 and was the first American star to play ball in Japan.

Carl Yastrzemski

CARL YASTRZEMSKI (1961-1983) played 765 games at first base throughout his 23 year Sox career. Yaz holds the club record for the most seasons played at first base (15) and his career fielding percentage of .995 is tied for all-time club best. As the Sox starting first baseman in 1970, Captain Carl led the league in both slugging (.592) and total bases (335) and barely missed his fourth batting title.

George Scott

GEORGE SCOTT (1966-71, 1977-79) hit 27 home runs with 90 RBI his rookie year of 1966 and was the All-Star Game starter. Regarded as one of the best fielding first basemen ever, the flashy Scott collected a first baseman record eight Gold Glove awards. "The Boomer" was a key member of the 1967 pennant winning club, batting .303 (fourth highest in the league) with 82 RBI and 19 "taters".

Bill Buckner

BILL BUCKNER (1985-87, 1990) led the team in doubles (46), extra base hits (65), RBI (110) and stolen bases (18 in 22 attempts) in 1985. "Billy Buck" led the league in assists two straight years and set a Major League record in that category with 184 in 1985 (smashing his own mark of 161 which he set with the Cubs in 1983) while playing a Major League record tying 162 games at first base.

Afield, his long hours of practice, using a miniature glove to promote a higher level of concentration, paid off. He committed only one error over the first month.

The hot start provided the confidence catalyst necessary for him to rack up that elusive breakthrough year. At season's end, the numbers scintillated: a .297 average, a .509 slugging percentage, 29 home runs, 79 walks, and 101 RBI. The stats of a budding superstar.

The hybrid hitting and mental approach had also spawned consistency and resiliency. Vaughn's batting average rested under .300 for only 10 games the entire season. And in pressure situations he responded with a maniacal fervor. After hitting only .220 with runners in scoring position in 1992, Mo delivered a robust .351 for the 1993 season.

Further, Mo began to be viewed as the de facto team leader through his work ethic and extracurricular actions. Perhaps most memorable was his linebacker-style blitzing tackle of Chicago White Sox DH George Bell who wound up balancing precariously on his head in an aborted charge at Sox pitcher Aaron Sele. "Nobody on the other team is going to hurt anybody on my team," vows Vaughn. "I play the game to protect my players."

After the season's final game, Vaughn dressed and left the clubhouse quickly. But this time he knew he'd be back.

"Everybody is so focused on immediate goals - 'I want to get this, I want to get that'. But you only play this game for a short while. It's how you're remembered ten years from now that's important. And that's what I concern myself with."

In baseball, there are a lot of simplistic questions—and just as many shallow answers. You hit or you don't; you make it or you go home and start your life over.

But Mo Vaughn sees beyond the world of the box score. He knows for many people less fortunate, life is a monumental struggle. And because of the way he was raised, he feels a compulsive duty to give back more than his fair share.

It is telling that even as his career was bot-

First Things First

toming out two seasons ago, Vaughn was busy forging a record of community service that will endure as his local legacy—no matter if he never strokes another home run.

The first player to sign up for the Red Sox Adopt-A-School Program in 1992, Vaughn was reminded of a scheduled appearance at the Charles Taylor Elementary School in Roxbury about the time he found himself with a wounded psyche back in Pawtucket. Cancelling it would have been an oh-so-easy cop out.

"I didn't want to go," Vaughn admits, citing the embarrassment and pain of the circumstances. "But I went."

That day Mo told the kids that he had been dealt a tough blow, but that he would work hard to overcome it. He advised that they needed to work just as hard to conquer the lethal lure of the streets.

"Things move so fast and you don't know if you're making a difference until you slow down and ask," he now reflects. "I discovered I was making a difference there. I adopted the school, and in turn the kids kept pushing me. It helped me come back."

Vaughn seems to make a difference wherever he shows up these days. And, seemingly, he shows up everywhere around the Boston area.

This past winter Mo could be seen, flanked by the governor and the mayor, leading Boston's inaugural Sleigh Ride Parade. At his side, by his own request, were his kids from Charles Taylor. Two days later he was escorting 250 youngsters to a Wang Center performance of The Nutcracker by the Boston Ballet—a Christmas gift to the Boys and Girls Clubs of South Boston, Charlestown, Roxbury, Chelsea and Dorchester. He bought the tickets because, "I wanted to give them something they would remember for a long time."

But perhaps the most dramatic example of Vaughn's emergence made national headlines last April. Jason Leader, a young cancer patient, was spending his 11th birthday at Children's Hospital in Boston when he unexpectedly received a phone call from California from his favorite baseball player. As the child gripped the receiver excitedly, Mo told him he would try to do something to make this birthday a little special.

That night at Anaheim Stadium Vaughn delivered by launching a home run over the right-field fence—a myth-making blow that thrilled Jason Leader and enraptured a nation.

Typically, Vaughn downplayed the events and tried to redirect the attention.

"There I was worrying about hits and errors," he said, "and here was a kid fighting for his life. Yet he was so upbeat. Talking to him just put everything in perspective. It made me realize how lucky I am. The game is important, but not that important."

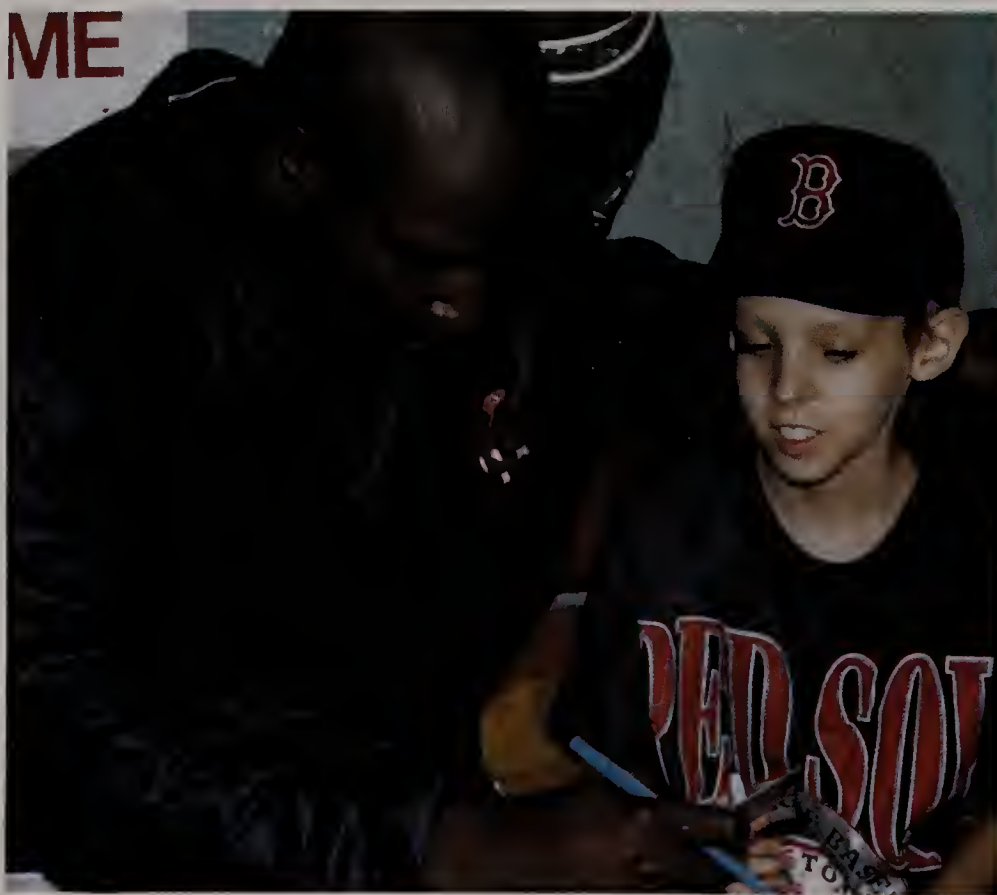

Following the 1993 season, Vaughn was back at the Boston Baseball Writers dinner, this time to receive the big club's Most Valuable Player award. Ten years from now, there will be those who recollect that Mo deserved the honor for his on-field achievements. But others will recall his contributions in another way. They will remember Mo Vaughn not only a player who put up big stats, but as a human being strong enough to reach down and pull someone else up with him.

"Getting that MVP award was great. But I'll take a visit from Jason Leader any day."

Mo was taught to keep first things first. ♦

Mo and his pal Jason Leader help each other keep everything in perspective.

NESN

NESN's Red Sox telecast team returns for another action-packed season. Play-by-play announcer Bob Kurtz enters his second season in the booth. The veteran announcer has also delivered play-by-play for the Minnesota Twins, Detroit Tigers, St. Louis Cardinals, and Minnesota North Stars. Kurtz teams up with former Red Sox second baseman Jerry Remy, who is back for his seventh season as color analyst on NESN's Red Sox telecasts.

Steve Burton, Tom Larson and Amy Stone are the other members of the NESN team. Burton serves as host of Red Sox Digest and Red Sox Instant Replay, Stone continues as NESN's Red Sox Feature Reporter, and Larson is back as NESN's on-field post-game reporter.

TV38

Sean McDonough teams up with Bob Montgomery for a seventh year calling games for TV38.

Montgomery's Red Sox ties stretch back to 1962, when he joined the organization as a catcher. In 1970 Bob made it to the big leagues, where he played for a decade.

McDonough came to TV38 in 1988, and that same year won a regional Emmy for his play-by-play coverage of Sox telecasts. The Hingham, MA native has earned national respect for his clear, accurate and often witty assessments of events on the field. In 1992, CBS named Sean the number one play-by-play announcer for Major League Baseball coverage.

WRKO • AM 680

Joe Castiglione and Jerry Trupiano return to the WRKO broadcast booth, bringing over 40 years of Major League experience with them.

Castiglione, a native of Hamden, Connecticut, began his major league broadcasting career in 1979 in Cleveland, and did TV play-by-play for the Brewers and Indians before coming to the Red Sox in 1983.

Trupiano spent two years calling play for the Houston Astros and the Montreal Expos. In addition, he's been heard on CBS Radio baseball broadcasts. Jerry's resume also boasts a long list of play-by-play assignments, including the Houston Oilers and Houston Rockets as well as Southwest Conference football and basketball.

Dear Desktop Computer,

Traveling all over Europe has been great. Being a portable is definitely the life. Have already visited the Eiffel Tower, Big Ben, the Greek Islands and rode camels to the pyramids in Giza. Still haven't met a compatible that's up to my standards. Wish you could be here. It's great to be able to get away from the desk. I will write again from the Outback.

Sincerely,
Portége

P.S. I think I saw Elvis.
